

How are financial services firms designing and embedding diversity and inclusion strategies?

Having sponsored PIMFA's Diversity and Inclusion awards last year, we are always interested to see how regulators and trade associations are prioritising theirs and regulated firms strategies and practices.

This week the FCA released their publication 'Understanding approaches to D&I in financial services' in which they detail their findings following observing how financial services firms are embedding D&I, and also an overview of initiatives that industry leaders can use to improve their strategies.

This publication is of particular interest to all regulated firms, click here to find out more.

FCA announces ESG Advisory Committee to its Board

Earlier this year the FCA Board agreed to establish a new ESG Advisory Committee to help execute its ESG-related responsibilities. This includes meeting the Government's expectation that we 'have regard' to the UK's commitment to achieving a net zero economy by 2050, when considering how to advance and achieve our objectives and functions. But what is ESG? Read our blog that gives an insight to why this is important in your firm....
